Top quality & freshness, no additives

All of our casings are made to the highest standards possible, giving your products a notable quality boost. Plus, with our unique integration in the slaughter line, the freshness of our products are unsurpassed in the business. Add to that the fact that our products are free of all chemicals, foreign elements, mucosa, and any other parts of the intestinal tract – we only add salt for preservation – and you will understand how CTH casings will strengthen the confidence of consumers that what they're eating or serving their families and friends is totally safe.

Tailored to your needs & wants

Seeking to make your production process as easy as possible, we tailor our casings to your specific needs and wants: from specific casing specifications perfect for your product and ready to fit right into your production line, to on spec packaging. As a casings specialist with global experience, we will deliver exactly what you want, how you want it.

The strictest quality & safety guidelines

Our casings are sourced with care from healthy animals, all of which have been approved for human consumption. We select our raw materials at our own production sites, where our skilled employees carefully inspect them according to our strict quality guidelines, complying with HACCP, BRC, and IFS quality standards.

Full traceability guaranteed

Recognizing the vital importance in today's market of maximum traceability, we source our products directly from abattoirs, where our operations are integrated in the slaughter line. This gives us direct control over the materials we process from the moment of extraction to their final shipment. It also means we can guarantee the full traceability of all of our casings, giving you, and your customers, peace of mind.

Looking after our world

Utilizing animal by-products is a sustainable activity in and of itself. This means that teaming up with CTH will automatically improve your company's sustainability performance. Beyond this, we are committed to protecting the environment, for example, by adopting sustainable production methods, and continually seeking new ways to manage resources with respect and wisdom.

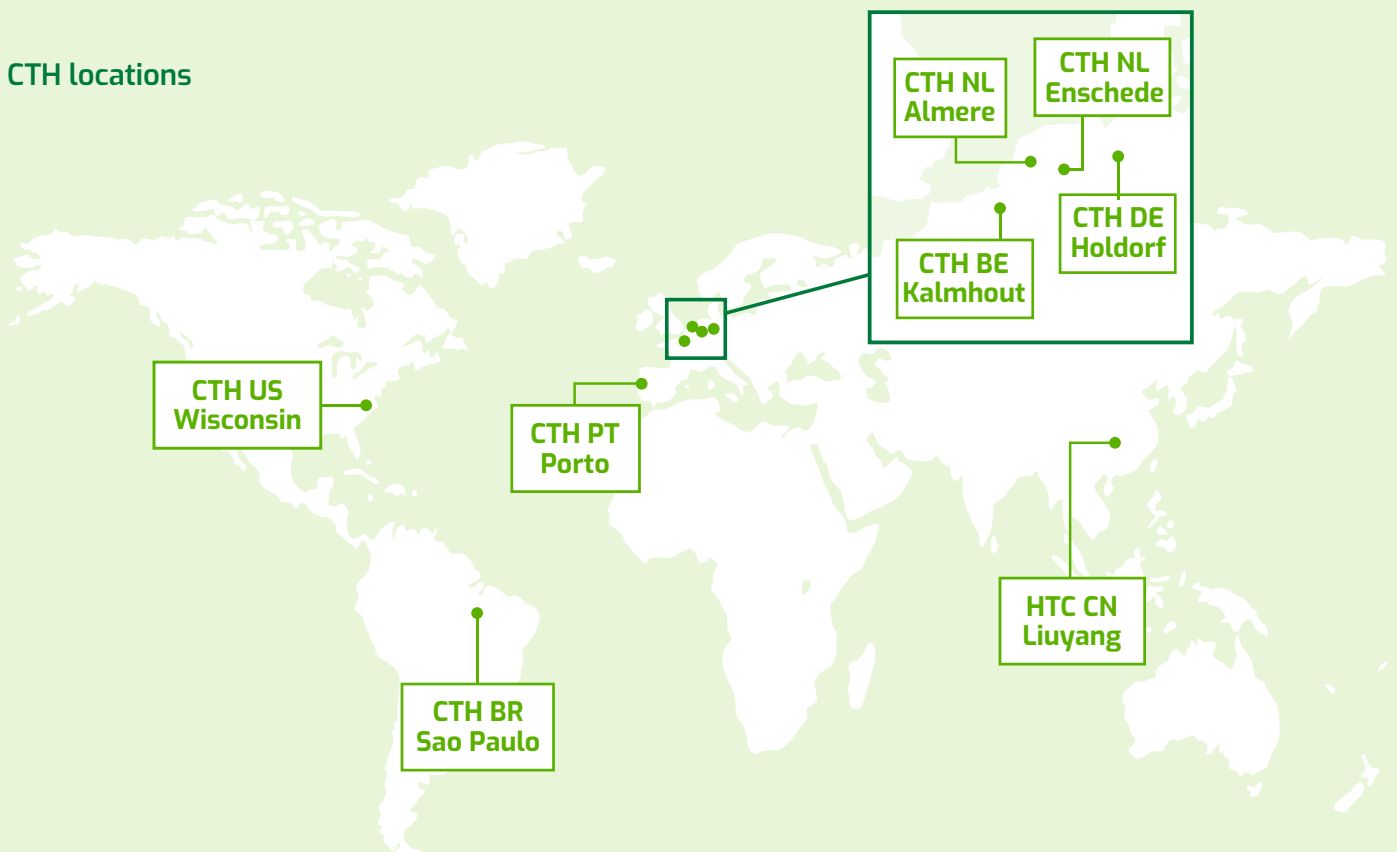

A partner you can trust

Throughout our history, we have come to understand the importance of trust. From farmer to producer and supplier to consumer, trust is a necessary part of our business. To us, it means providing you with safe, consistent, high-quality products, delivered quickly and efficiently – and making sure that with CTH you have a robust, reliable partner.
